

The Wellington Hospital is named one of London's top heart surgery centres by The Healthcare Commission

The Wellington Hospital has been officially named as one of London's most successful centres of excellence and the leading private hospital for cardiac care in the Capital.

The Healthcare Commission named The Wellington as one of the top ten hospitals for heart surgery alongside a number of leading London teaching hospitals and the Clinic's two sister hospitals, The Harley Street Clinic and The London Bridge Hospital.

The Chief Executive of the Wellington, Mr Keith Hague, said the hospital's specialist cardiac teams had a long standing international reputation for the highest standards of care. "Our consultants and specialist medical teams are among the most distinguished in the country and we congratulate them for this outstanding achievement," he said.
